FRIDAY, JUNE 24, 1887.

THE QUEEN'S JUBILEE.

At twelve minutes past two o'clock on the morning of the 20th of June, 1837, died William IV, who seven years before had ascended the throne of Great Britain and Ireland on the death of his brother George IV. It is an axiom of monarchical governments that "the king never dies," and hence the French heralds of the olden time, when one of their monarchs was gathered to his fathers, were wont to proclaim le Roi est mort! vive le Roi! Victoria succeeded her uncle King William, and in virtue of this recognized law and custom, her accession to the crown is held to have taken place immediately on the demise of her predecessor. In point of fact, four hours after the king's death the youthful Princess was roused from her slumbers and, before the outside world was aware that the throne had become vacant, was hailed by the Primate of England as Queen of the British dominions. At eleven o'clock the same day (having attained her majority the previous month) she took the oath to govern according to law, and on the following day her accession to the throne was publicly proclaimed with the usual pomp and ceremony, the coronation taking place about a year afterwards on 28th of June, 1838. On the 20th of this present month of June, 1887, our good Queen has thus completed the fiftieth year of her reign, and her jubilee as sovereign of the British Empire is therefore being celebrated by a loyal and affectionate people in the United Kingdom, in all her colonies and dependencies throughout the world, and in every foreign country where men of British race are to be found located.

Victoria Alexandrina is the daughter of Edward Duke of Kent, son of George III and brother of George IV and William IV, and her mother the Duchess of Kent was the daughter of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg. Victoria was born 24th of May, 1819, and her father having died the following year, the Duchess devoted herself to the care and education of their only child with a success of which she and the British Empire have since reaped the fruits. Indeed much credit has always been justly accorded to her excellent mother for the assiduous cultivation of those talents and virtues with which the Queen has adorned her exalted station, which have endeared her to her people as one of the best of sovereigns, and procured for her the admiration and profound respect of the whole civilized world.

The Queen is the descendant of an illustrious race of ancestors, and is the representative of those two long lines of English and Scottish kings who for more than a thousand years have reigned in Britain from the days of the Anglo-Saxon Alfred of England and the Celtic Kenneth of Scotland. She is the successor alike of the Bruce and the Plantagenet who strove for the mastery at Bannockburn, and of the Tudor and the Stewart who fought the fatal fight at Flodden.

The Queen was married on the 10th June, 1840, to her cousin Prince Albert, from whose honored name our good town has taken its designation. The Prince Consort was a member of the family of Coburg, and throughout his life was distinguished for every manly virtue, for great prudence and wisdom. In her domestic life the Queen has shared her experiences common to humanity, the joy of births, the pains of bereavement; the saddest of all sorrows—lover and friend removed into darkness—for "death knocks with equal foot at the cabins of the poor and the palaces of kings." Prince Albert died on the 14th Dec., 1861, to the great grief of the whole Empire and the irreparable loss of the Queen and their family, which has since lost two of its members by death—the Princess Alice in 1878, and the Duke of Albany in 1884. Three sons, the Prince of Wales and the Dukes of Edinburgh and Connaught survive; and four daughters, the Princess Royal, wife of the Crown Prince of Germany; Helena, married to Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein; Louise (in whom we Canadians feel especially interested), married to the Marquis of Lorne, formerly Governor General of the Dominion; and Beatrice, married to Prince Henry of Battenberg. The Prince of Wales, the heir apparent, is a man of excellent parts, and his wife Princess Alexandra of Denmark, is a universal favorite. The Empire's best wishes are with the heir apparent. May it be long before he is called on to assume the Crown of Great Britain, and when, in the course of nature, that event does come round, may he as a sovereign faithfully follow the example of his honored parents.

The accession of Queen Victoria occurred while Britain was enjoying that era of peace which, following upon the overthrow of the great Napoleon, has continued—though not without interruption—till the present time. The British motto now-a-days is "defence not defiance," and the race is not emulous of being considered warlike or aggressive. It was not always so with them. England and Scotland, which are now so happily one in the bonds of peaceful union, fought stubbornly against each other for centuries. Not seldom, too, has the war cry "St. George for merry England" borne down "Montjoye, St. Denis" on the fields of France. The victories of the Black Prince at Crecy and Poitiers and of that "Wild, gallant Harry, whose blade Flamed on the field of Agincourt," are emblazoned on the roll of fame and the names of Blenheim and Plassey, Trafalgar and Waterloo are amongst the most glorious and momentous that modern history records. These were enough for military renown. But even our Queen's reign, though on the whole peaceful, has again and again been disturbed by wars and rumors of wars. Asia has seen the glitter of the British bayonet in Afghanistan and Persia, in China and Burma, not will the Indian mutiny soon be forgotten.

The dark continent has been the scene of action in Ashantee and Caffaria, in Zululand and the Transvaal, in Abyssinia and Egypt. Europe has witnessed the greatest struggle of all in that Crimean campaign that humbled the autocrat of all the Russias, and even our own Dominion has not been free from troubles which, fortunately for all concerned, never assumed the proportions of war.

In looking back, however, over the reign of Queen Victoria, and comparing it with former periods of equal duration we cannot fail to mark the rapid and vast progress and development of the Empire in population as well as in material wealth, in commerce and industry, and all the arts of peace, nor to feel how true is the adage, "peace has its victories as well as war." Space will not permit us even to glance at the principal events in the domestic history of the Empire during the last fifty years, but a reign which has produced so many great and good men as the Victorian era is indeed a prolific mine for the future historian to work, and the mere mention of some of the more prominent names sufficiently indicates the energy and power, the philanthropy and genius that have been at work for the material and moral welfare of their race. In such men as Peel and Wellington, Cobden and Bright, Derby and Palmerston, Disraeli and Gladstone, one recognizes statesmen of the highest order. At the mention of Brewster and Faraday, Murchison and Herschell, Darwin and Huxley, we recall the mighty strides of recent years in science. That art has suffered no neglect the names of Wilkie and Chantrey, Turner and Landseer, Millais and Ruskin are sufficient proof. In literature, Wordsworth and Southey, Browning and Tennyson, while they stand out among the poets of their own time, take a high rank among the sweet singers of all ages, and history has never found more brilliant and learned exponents than Luigard and Grote, Macaulay and Hallam, Froude and Freeman. In fiction, Bulwer-Lytton and Dickens, Thackeray and "George Eliot" have powerfully aided in raising the novel to the level of a great moral teaching agent, and such thinkers as Carlyle and J. S. Mill, Buckle and Matthew Arnold among secular writers, and Chalmers, Irving, Newman, Maurice, Colenso and Stanley among theologians are sufficient evidence that during the period under review the British mind has been actively and earnestly seeking after truth.

In colonial affairs the Confederation of the Canadian Provinces, the transfer of the Hudson Bay Territory to the Dominion Government, the opening up of the Northwest Territories and the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway have been some of the more important events to us in a local sense, and in common with the mother country and the other colonies and dependencies, there is an interest for us in the great question of Imperial Federation which, though still in embryo, has been of late years becoming more and more prominent. Possibly this question may in the near future assume an aspect of greater interest, we fear the life spoken of by Principal Grant at Winnipeg the other day to unite the whole English speaking race—Britain, America, Canada—must be relegated to the region of utopian dream.

Jubilees do not frequently happen in any walk of life, but they are especially rare among crowned heads. English history records only three previous instances of monarchs reigning fifty years or upwards, namely, Edward III, who reigned fifty years over England alone, James I who reigned thirty five years over Scotland alone and twenty two more over Great Britain and George III the Queen's great father, who reigned fifty nine years. So from the rarity of the occurrence it becomes noteworthy, but we the loyal subjects of Queen Victoria have a stronger incentive to rejoice over the present auspicious event; for we recognize in her at once the head of the most powerful empire the world has ever seen, the most gifted and virtuous, the most constitutional and most popular sovereign that has ever occupied the throne of Britain, while as woman, as wife, as mother, Queen Victoria has been a pattern for high and low alike—and the decidedly higher moral tone now prevailing both in courtly and common life is in no small degree traceable to her admirable example and great personal influence.

Next Friday (which is also Dominion day) the people of Prince Albert are to celebrate the Jubilee. The arrangements are in the hands of an able committee who will spare no effort to make the celebration a success. Let us every one help according to ability and opportunity. Loyalty will be our watchword, and Whig and Tory, politics and parties will for the time be unknown. High and low, rich and poor, young and old together will meet on a common level, animated by a common spirit and true one hearted wish will arise for long life and happiness to our beloved Queen and "that her bones, when she has run her course and sleeps in blessings, may have a tomb of people's tears wept on them."

Mr. Dawson's large residence on Victoria street is almost completed.
The Orangemen of Moose Jaw are thinking of giving a supper and ball on the coming twelfth.
The half-breed Goudy, who murdered Hector McLeish, is well known in Regina. He was here some two weeks ago and was swaggering around town, as was his custom, with a loaded revolver in his belt.
A Mounted Policeman at Calgary, named Fisher, who was serving a twelve month's term for desertion, made a daring attempt last week to escape. The guard shot him in the back, as he was entering the river.

BATTLEFORD.

From the Herald, June 4.
Work has been begun on the Battle River bridge.
There was a slight frost on the night of the 2nd.
The Saskatchewan has been rising steadily for the past week.
H. J. Sully got down with his raft of timber on Tuesday. This is the first arrival of the season.
The lost band of horses belonging to Macfarlane Brothers, after baffling most diligent and extended search for two or three weeks, returned home of their own accord.
A brilliant party assembled in St. George's Church at noon on Wednesday to witness the marriage of Mr. Julius F. Dyke-Parker to Miss Maud Eliza Phillips, both of this place. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. F. Pritchard.
We have much pleasure in announcing that the Government has recognized the force of our arguments against taking the snider rifles now in the district and storing them in Winnipeg. We have received a telegram from Mr. Macdowall in which he says that these rifles will not be shipped out of the country, but will be cleaned and left in charge of the Mounted Police. This is a decision that will meet the unanimous approval of the people here.
Mr. H. J. Montgomery and wife arrived from Prince Albert last night. Welcome home.

QU'APPELLE.

From the Progress, June 9.
The crop prospects are splendid.
Yesterday evening a rifle shooting match took place between five married men and five bachelors of the town, and resulted in favor of the latter.
The District meeting of the Methodist church commenced here yesterday. A public meeting will be held this evening in the Methodist church, which will be addressed by several of the ministers in attendance.

M. H. Gault ex M. R. for Montreal, died on June 1st, aged 65.

The proposal to hold the Jubilee festivities in Halifax is probably knocked on the head. The citizen's committee prepared a programme for which they asked $1,000. The council refused to give more than $2,000, probably because they were not on the committee, and to-night the latter threw up the sponge, leaving the council to run affairs as it pleases.

Amusing between Edward Hanlan and A. A. St. John was held in the office of the Inter Ocean, and another race arranged between Hanlan and Gaudaur over the Pullman course, to take place July 24th. The articles of agreement are in the hands of a copy of the articles for the race on Decoration Day. The race is for $1,000 a side, but on notice from Hanlan may be raised to $2,500. The reason assigned for making the stakes $1,000 a side is that Hanlan is putting up his own money and has not had time to consult with his backers, Messrs. Gaudaur and Duryea. When he arrives in Toronto he will confer with them and if they care to back him again the stakes will be raised as per contract.

LOCAL NEWS.

Drink Montserrat Limetta Champagne, cooling and refreshing, at Clark's Drug Store.

Shortly after the Judge's arrival on Monday evening he was serenaded by the P. A. C. Band at the residence of Dr. Bain. After playing a tune or two, the members of the band were addressed by his honor in a few neatly turned sentences expressive of his gratification at their kind attention, and were afterwards presented with a more tangible token of his good will. The band then adjourned to the residence of Mr. O. E. Hughes, and welcomed him home in true musical style.

Committee meetings are being held, and final arrangements completed for the Jubilee celebration. The programme will be as follows—The band will play the National Anthem, etc., in the early morning; next the lacrosse match; at 10 o'clock, the school children will sing their various pieces on the platform east of the public school; the athletic sports and horse races come next; and in the evening the fire works, the day being brought to a close with a citizens' ball in the court-house.

"SEED GRAIN"

To the Editor of the Times.

SIR,—In last issue of The Times I am treated to a little of advice by Mr. W. Craig to let me choose to sell my seed grain to the public, as I had no right to defend myself against that stupid and illegal for the seed grain committee, but which was undoubtedly a covert and malignant attack from another source.

However this may be, Mr. Craig, strange to say, has been prevailed upon to come to the rescue, and by so doing commits himself to its responsibility. His grounds of defence, although not very creditable to him, are the only ones available, namely, bookkeeping and an awkward attempt at misrepresentation. His insults, sneers and insinuations are altogether beneath my notice. After discharging himself of a great deal of conscientiously irrelevant to the subject in hand Mr. Craig goes on to say—"Mr. McTaggart endeavored to make fun at the seed grain committee because they recommended one lot of oats from another, and again 'He sneers at the smallness of the quantity of this one lot of fifty bushels.'" Now Mr. Craig cannot be so obtuse in intellect as not to know that I did neither the one nor the other. What I did do was, not to poke fun at the committee for anything they may have recommended, nor to sneer at any quantity offered, however small it may have been, but simply to hold up to deserved ridicule the utterly absurd idea prominent in that report, that the purchase of a lot of 50 or 100 bushels, I care not which, would be the means of affording the farmers of the district generally speaking a ready market for their grain, and in it Mr. Craig can resume this brilliant idea from the Reduction of the same, he shall have my congratulations for the clever feat. Moreover, the sample referred to as belonging to a well known farmer was, after all, not recommended by the committee. Mr. Craig's report thereon merely stating that they would recommend it if it was better winnowed.

Mr. Craig also proceeds in defence of this second and more serious charge that a number of farmers were refused seed grain, and here he evinces such weakness as to commit to a positive "give away," he being unable to give the name of but one solitary farmer that he says was refused seed grain, while the report states that a number were so treated.

This conclusively shows that the charge was made without having the evidence before them to sustain it. Would it not be the duty of any intelligent committee or of a committee that had any regard for its reputation or responsibility before making any public charge of a serious nature to have any evidence thereon at its command and to have the same first duly weighed and considered? This committee, however, takes a different course. They first make the charge, and now when its accuracy is challenged the chairman of the committee can adduce but one solitary case in support of it, at the same time throwing out a broad hint to the clique to trump up now such evidence as can be obtained. A most infamous position surely for any body of men to be placed in.

The case of Mr. John C. McNevin is briefly this. He came to me for a few bushels of barley, after he was through with other seedling, without giving me any previous notice of his requirements; and long after all the barley on hand had been allotted. On that occasion I could not furnish him with barley without running the risk of depriving others of deserved notice of the quantity allotted to him. I told Mr. McNevin, however, that should the parties to whom it was allotted fail to come forward for it in a reasonable time, I might be in a position later on to comply with his request. In the meantime I could let him have oats, which was the best I could do and Mr. Craig admits that I did offer him the barley subsequently. This was Mr. J. C. McNevin's case, and there were other cases of a similar nature through no fault of mine, but simply by their own neglect in not duly notifying me of their requirements. And these facts are well known to Mr. Craig. How he can prove that a number of farmers were refused oats and barley, I am curious to know. Certainly Mr. McNevin, nor any other farmer so far as I am aware were not so treated, as where barley could not be furnished oats could and were always supplied when needed. And the quantity of barley now on hand amounts to fifteen bushels. I offer these explanations for the information of the general public, not for the information of the seed grain committee, who are fully aware of the facts.

Yours truly,
JOHN McTAGGART,
Agent Dominion Lands.

We are glad to welcome back our old friend and M. N. W. C. Mr. Hughes. In putting a handle to his name in future we presume we must by and by drop the affix and substitute the honorable prefix to which he is now entitled. While we congratulate him on his appointment and the district on having obtained an excellent agent, we shall be sorry if we thereby lose an equally excellent member.

We are much pleased to record the arrival of Judge McIntyre and to offer him a hearty welcome to our town and to his official district. Our knowledge of the judge is not of yesterday, and we have been gratified to note in the success of his professional career how well the promise of former years has been fulfilled. His appointment is honorable to himself, highly creditable to the Government of the day and one upon which the district of Saskatchewan is to be warmly congratulated.

We understand Mr. Barker, of Orangeville, Ont., Inspector of Registration of Titles Offices for the North West Territories, is to leave town in a day or two. Mr. Barker has completed an extended tour throughout the Territories made for the purpose of instructing the Registrars in the details and workings of the Territorial system of registration which is now in force, and he is so thoroughly conversant with his duties and imparts his knowledge so frankly, pleasantly, and carefully to all concerned that we do not wonder at his having won such golden opinions here and everywhere on his route. He seems to us to be emphatically the right man in the right place. We understand from Mr. Barker that he has been immensely pleased with the working of the local registration office. He has found everything in perfect order and, indeed, nobody who knows Col. Sprout and his habitually exact business methods would ever have expected anything else. Mr. Barker in turn us a new office including a vault of brick or stone and iron will have to be built to meet the requirements of the Act.
